Most students need help navigating today's media-rich world. To be literate now means being able to read, write, listen, speak, view, and represent across all media — including both print and nonprint texts, such as film, TV, podcasts, websites, visual art, fashion, architecture, landscape, and music. Pam and Ryan Goble (mother and son and co-authors of Making Curriculum Pop) will use this session to show how you can use media, technology and pop culture as rich sites for studying and learning “core content.” The presentation will include a bank of “essential” tools & tips for learners that will help improve schoolwork and better equip them for the rigor of what lies ahead.

Pam Goble EdD is an adjunct professor of education at Aurora and Benedictine University and Ryan Goble is the Teaching and Learning Coordinator at Glenbard 87. This program will begin at 7 p.m. at Glenbard North, 990 Kuhn Rd. in Carol Stream. Students are encouraged to attend.

Also on Oct 16 high school seniors and their parents can receive one-on-one assistance filing the FAFSA from financial aid specialists at the Illinois Students Assistance Corps. Please bring the following necessary documents: 2016 Federal tax return, 2016 W2 forms, record of untaxed income and investment/asset /business value. FAFSA assistance in English and Spanish will be available from 6:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. in Glenbard North's computer lab.

These free programs are open to the public. CPDUs are available.
